COACHING

concept

Joaquín Melchor Rojas, 196

Since 1986, dedicated his professional efforts to develop methods to ensure that the designs are implemented with fidelity and balance, both in the field of restoration and in modern architecture.

Acquired expertise from other skilled professionals with extensive experience, in color and line design at a time that delves into the physics of materials in order to shape and craft techniques to achieve unique designs with high added value.

After several experiences in the field of education, now offers his expertise available to the professional who wants to improve his craft, using the method on the job training under the supervision of the client.

“ in effective implementation of designs with high added value, improving the reading we do of our architecture”.

Given the complexity of the logistics and maintenance of specialized human and technical resources, and their impact on the price of the work, jmrarchitectural focuses strengthening the service by educating local professionals so that they have all the resources necessary to execute and maintain specific work.

Unlike other coaching services, it offers a practical aspect, to be performed on the job, integrating jmrarchitectural within the human resource infrastructure, directing and managing from the beginning to delivery operations.
